A SPECIAL DAY TO ENJOY – Wednesday 26th October 2011 FOOD, ART AND TRAVEL IN THE 18th CENTURY

Ian Kelly award winning biographer, actor and TV food-historian, spends a day detailing, with lavish illustrations, the travelling experiences of two of the most influential food writers of the Georgian period – Marie-Antoine Careme and Giacomo Casanova.

Taking us on a journey across Europe via St Petersburg, Venice, Rome, Paris and London, this study day attempts to recreate some of the travel experiences of a below-stairs chef and an above-stairs Venetian gambler. Ian will offer telling insights into why gastronomy became a craze in the 18th C. and what these men's lives tell us about the debates that raged on art, luxury, food and libertinism in a Revolutionary Age.

Venue: Culford School, north of Bury St Edmunds (map will be on reverse of ticket)

Time: Coffee from 11.00am: lecture starts at 11.30am
Final session ends approx. 3.30pm

Cost: £23 per NADFAS member – to include light lunch
£25 non members (good varied finger buffet)
